

ICE Kite and ICE Ghost

Red Yacht Design has teamed up with Dykstra Naval Architects to reveal two new designs: the 64.2-metre ICE Kite and its 28-metre shadow vessel ICE Ghost. The owner's brief for ICE Kite was to "create a yacht that feels like she is an integral part of the sea, inspired by sea animals". ICE Kite has accommodation for 10 guests, as well as a swimming pool and helipad. Inside is the kite lounge, specifically designed for watching the yacht's kite in action, which also functions as a dining room. ICE Ghost will carry a range of toys and tenders including an Icon A5 aeroplane, a U-Boat Worx Super Yacht Sub 3 and a 12-metre custom RIB also designed by Red, with a top speed of 60 knots.

The BlackCat 30's spacious cockpit

BlackCat 30

Malcolm McKeon's new sailing catamaran concept joins BlackCat Superyachts' range of high-performance cats. The 30.4-metre model will feature the "same beautiful lines of its larger sister", says BlackCat founder and Australian Olympic yachtsman Mitch Booth, while interior design comes from M2 Atelier. Accommodation is for eight guests in six cabins, with crew quarters for four. Speaking about the design, McKeon says: "There's been space in the market for some time for a large catamaran design that can offer the luxury and quality of a superyacht this size."

SWASH concept

This SWASH (Small Waterplane Area Single Hull) concept from Steve Gresham is the result of a broker's challenge to "design something that was really different", Gresham says. "Inspiration came from thinking what a spaceship would look like on earth – but with the proviso that it would be possible to build such a vessel." The result is this design, which could be scaled from 70 metres to 80 metres, and comes equipped with ample deck spaces and a certified helipad. A hydrofoil ensures a smooth ride of up to 50 knots for up to 12 guests. The catamaran-inspired layout includes a large saloon with a family kitchen.
